1.5 Essay Questions

1) In addition to the U.S. Constitution, what other sources assist in protecting our liberty and justice?

Answer: Answers should include state constitutions and the development of state rights. Additionally, constitutions cannot protect all the interests of the people, so statutes were developed to compensate. Examples of statutes discussed in this chapter include Title VII and Section 1983. The Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure may also be discussed.

Objective: Summarize the constitutional basis for criminal procedure. Level:

Intermediate

2) Explain how Gideon v. Wainwright is an example of stare decisis.

Answer: Gideon provided the right to counsel. The right to counsel was not addressed in the Constitution. Without precedent, defendants would not have the right to counsel.

Objective: Explain the importance of precedent.

Level: Intermediate

3) Discuss why the due process perspective resembles a liberal political orientation and why crime control is more of a conservative perspective.

Answer: Good answers should include a discussion of the competing concerns in criminal procedure of controlling crime and the guarantee of due process rights. Liberals tend to focus on liberty interests – individual liberty and rights – while conservatives tend to focus on crime control using a “cost/benefit perspective.” Due process believe it is the government’s job to maximize human freedom and that a suspect is innocent until proven guilty. Due process has four ideals: that the criminal justice system should look like an obstacle course, quality over quantity, insistence on formality, and faith in the courts. Crime control advocates believe that the benefit of controlling crime to society at large outweighs the cost of infringing on some individuals’ due process protections. Crime controls also has four ideals: the criminal process should look like an assembly line, quantity over quality, insistence on informality, and faith in the police.

- 4) The United States chief justices greatly influence society's political stances and moral trends. What were the outcomes when Earl Warren was chief justice?

Answer: The Warren Court was from 1953 until 1969. The main outcome during this time period was extensive constitutional protections for criminal defendants. It was concerned with individual rights and due process.

Objective: Summarize important issues and trends in criminal procedure.

Level: Intermediate

- 5) When comparing criminal procedure in theory versus reality, police officers cannot stop a motorist without some level of justification. As discussed in the book, what is the reality of this situation?

Answer: The reality is that people are often stopped without justification and are stopped based on prejudice. In addition, when those stopped without justification try to file a complaint, the results of those complaints are often in favor of law enforcement.

Objective: Compare the theory of criminal procedure to the reality. Level:

Intermediate

- 6) Aside from the federal court system, every state has a different court system. Review your home state's court system and outline how it is organized and how that state's courts function.

Answer: Answers will vary, but should include courts of limited jurisdiction, courts of general jurisdiction, superior courts, intermediate appellate courts, and the state supreme court. Poor answers will only list the courts and not develop their functions and roles within the state.

Objective: Outline the structure of the court system, including the responsibilities and jurisdictions of each level. Level: Intermediate

- 7) Analyze Figure 1.9 (The Criminal Justice System) on page 25 of the text. Why is the United States criminal justice system so complicated? What are the benefits of our system? What are the drawbacks of our system?

Answer: Answers will vary. Poor answers will only list the steps outlined in the chapter. Well prepared answers will discuss how this system needs to be complicated in order to provide due process and justice.

1.6 Critical Thinking Questions

- 1) Considering that the Bill of Rights was designed as a series of limitations on the federal government, does it make sense that many of the same limitations have been applied to all states by the United States Supreme Court? Take a position and defend it.

Answer: Answers should include a discussion of the various incorporation arguments, including the total incorporation perspective; the selective incorporation, or the fundamental rights perspective; the total incorporation plus perspective; and finally the view that some have that the topic of incorporation deserves a case-by-case consideration. The important aspect of this question is the position taken and the analytical support given to the answer. Which incorporation perspective makes the best sense to the writer, and why? Poor answers will merely recite definitions and have minimal analysis.

Objective: Summarize the constitutional basis for criminal procedure.

Level: Difficult

- 2) Using the website <http://www.supremecourtus.gov>, find a Supreme Court case and write about it. Be sure to incorporate at least five key terms used in the chapter.

Answer: Answers will vary, but should demonstrate the ability to find, review, and analyze a court case and decision. Poor answers will just recite definitions and skip the analysis.

Objective: Outline the structure of the court system, including the responsibilities and jurisdictions of each level.

Level: Difficult

- 3) Should Americans enjoy a right to privacy, even though no such right is listed in the Constitution? Give some current examples of situations in which you believe the right to privacy should be respected by the courts.

Answer: Answers will discuss the basis for the right to privacy and then relate it to modern examples, which could include Internet issues, medical marijuana use, abortions, religious freedoms, etc.
