Essay (10)

Q64. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Comprehension

What is the importance of the word guest in guestology?

Suggested answer: Sample response: The use of "guest" in guestology implies that all the organization's employees must treat customers as if they were guests in their own homes.

Q65. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Comprehension

Define guest experience.

Suggested answer: Sample response: The guest experience is the sum total of the experiences the guest has with the service provider on a given occasion or set of occasions.

Q66. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Comprehension

Describe whose responsibility it is for meeting or exceeding the expectations of the guests.

Suggested answer: Sample response: The major responsibility for meeting or exceeding the expectations created by the marketing department and by the past experiences of repeat guests lies with the operations side of the organization.

Q67. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Comprehension

Define service quality, service value, and cost.

Suggested answer: Sample response: The service quality of the entire guest experience or of any part of it is defined as the difference between the quality the guest expects and the quality the guest receives. The service value of the guest experience (V_e) is equal to the quality of the experience (Q_e) as “calculated” divided by all the costs incurred by the guest to obtain the experience. The cost of a service is the financial and non-financial burden incurred by a guest to obtain a service, including tangible quantifiable costs (like price) and intangible non-quantifiable costs like opportunity costs of foregoing alternative opportunities, annoyance at receiving unsatisfactory service, and so forth.

Q68. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Analysis

Why is studying guestology helpful to an organization?

Suggested answer: Sample response: While guestology is obviously most helpful in organizing knowledge about the management of hospitality businesses—like hotels and restaurants, which have traditionally spoken of their clientele as guests—it can be used to study and understand any organization in which people are served in some way.

Q69. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Application

Using examples, explain how service is an intangible part of the guest experience.

Suggested answer: Sample response: Service is the intangible part of a transaction relationship that creates value between a provider organization and its customer, client, or guest. More simply, a service is something that is done for us. Services can be provided directly to the customer (e.g., a spa treatment, a haircut, and medical procedures) or for the customer (e.g., finding and purchasing tickets to a show, lawn care, and car repair) or with the customer (e.g., guided tour, self-service wine bar, and a classroom). The services can be provided by a person (e.g., by a service associate in a restaurant or by a concierge) or via technology (e.g., by booking a ticket online, following a guided tour on a smartphone app, or interacting with a robot concierge).

Q70. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Analysis

Explain the components of the guest experience including how each is important.

Suggested answer: Sample response: The service product, sometimes called the service package or service/product mix, is why the customer, client, or guest comes to the organization in the first place. Most service products have both tangible and intangible elements and can range from mostly product with little service to mostly service with little if any product. The second component of the guest experience is the service setting or service environment in which the experience takes place. The term servicescape, the landscape within which service is experienced, has been used to describe the aspects of the setting that contribute to the guest's overall feel of the experience. The third part of the guest experience is the service delivery system, including the human components (the restaurant server who places the meal on the table or the sound engineer at the concert) and the physical production processes (the kitchen facilities in the restaurant or the rock concert's sophisticated amplification system) plus the organizational and information systems and techniques that help deliver the service to the customer. While all aspects of the service delivery system are important, the people interacting with customers or guests are by far the most able to make a difference in how customers feel about the value and quality of the experience.

Q71. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Analysis

Why is it important to not over-deliver on promises?

Suggested answer: Sample response: Organizations must be careful not to over-deliver to the point of making guests feel uncomfortable or unpleasantly surprised. When does enough service become too much? The excellent hospitality organization will do two things to find out. First, it will spend the time and money to train its employees to be alert to customer cues, signals, and body language so they can fine-tune their interaction with their customers. Second, it will constantly survey or ask its guests what they thought about the experience to ensure guests receive more service value than they expect but not so much more as to detract from the experience.

Q72. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Analysis

Explain who defines quality and value in the hospitality field.

Suggested answer: Sample response: In the hospitality field, however, only the guest can define quality and value. No matter how brilliantly the organization designs the service, the environment, and the delivery system or develops measurable service standards, if the guest is dissatisfied with any of these elements, the organization has failed to meet the guest's expectations; it has not provided a guest experience of acceptable quality and value.

Q73. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Analysis

Why bother to consider the guest as part of guestology?

Suggested answer: Sample response: The hotels you return to, the restaurant you dine at again and again, and the theme park you enjoy and recommend to friends and family are the ones that take the time to figure out what you seek in the guest experience, offer it to you, and then make clear in all they say and do that it was their pleasure that you sought it out from them. If they make every effort to understand you and give you what you seek in that experience, you will feel an emotional liking for them that makes it memorable, ascribe high value to the guest experience they provide, return when you again need that service, and post on Facebook so all your friends and neighbors can know what a terrific place that hospitality organization is.
